Horizontal Integration- Interdisciplinary Connections

Social Studies: Cultures (Geography)

Display a map of the United States and provide a blank map to the students. Using the story, Sacagawea, students will draw the route that Sacagawea travels in the text.

History: Individual Contributions

Students will research how individuals contributed to the economy of the students' state. They will include people who have built industries (ie. oil business) and tourist attractions that draw people to the state.

SOC.6.1.5.GeoHE.1

Use a variety of sources from multiple perspectives, including aerial photographs or satellite images to describe how human activity has impacted the physical environment during different periods of time in New Jersey and the United States.

SOC.6.1.5.EconET.2

Use quantitative data to engage in cost benefit analyses of decisions that impact the individual and/or community.

Vertical Integration- Discipline Mapping

The curriculum map in Grades 1 – 5 focus on several domains that are developed and reviewed across units. Life science, community, social relationships, cultures and are all domains that are spiraled across the grades.

- In life science students explore animals by learning about how they communicate, their traits, habitats, life cycles and behaviors.
- Students will learn the functional processes of a community including community types, and active membership.
- Students will explore social relationships. They will find out what is important about being a friend, become aware of their feelings and emotions, gain appreciation for differences and unique characteristics of others.
- Cultural awareness is heightened through developing in-depth knowledge of history, traditional stories, historical figures and documents, and traditions.
- American History is presented through texts that include the settling and agricultural challenges faced in the west by pioneers, character traits of successful leaders and inventors, and the opinions that led to the fight for freedom and development of the American government.
