Transfer

The Cold War policy of containment and the domino theory led the United States to become increasingly involved in events in Vietnam. American officials were concerned that if Vietnam fell to communism, the entire region might be at risk. Most Americans supported initial intervention in Vietnam. After several years, however, mounting casualties, rising debt, and lack of progress soon turned public opinion and undermined support.

Enduring Understandings

- To stop the spread of communism in Southeast Asia, the United States used its military to support South Vietnam.
- The United States sent troops to fight in Vietnam, but the war quickly turned into a stalemate.
- An antiwar movement in the U.S. pitted supporters of the government's war policy against those who opposed it.
- An enemy attack in Vietnam, two assassinations, and a chaotic political convention made 1968 an explosive year.
- President Nixon instituted his Vietnamization policy, and America's longest war finally came to an end.

Essential Questions

- How and why did the United States support their foreign ally (France) Vietnam War efforts?
