Decision Making

Enduring Understandings

The difference between quick decions and good decision making.

Making a decision with your heart and your head.

The comfort zone trap can lead to bad decision making.

How to frame a good decision.

How to create alternative choices.

By understanding the importance of mental/emotional health, we can self assess ourselves and manage our health in appropriate ways.

By learning the reasons people may abuse substances, we can understand that is not a healthy way to cope with our emotions.

Essential Questions

What is the problem and how can it be framed as a choice?

What things do we care about that could be affected by this decision?

What alternatives can be considered?

What are the likely consequences of different courses of action?

How do we feel about the tradeoffs? What do we like best, all things considered?

What could trigger us to reconsider, re-assess, or adapt our behaviors?

Why is it important to utilize healthy behaviors when it comes to mental/emotional health?

Why is it important to recognize when you need help with your emotions?
