Enduring Understandings

Transfer - Entrepreneurs work with limited resources, so they must find creative ways to develop and manufacture their products. Product development is a long process based on feedback from customers who test the product. Coming up with an idea for a product or service is only a small part of creating a successful business--you have to turn that idea into reality. Production and distribution are two ways entrepreneurs bring new products to market.

Enduring Understanding - Discuss how entrepreneurs develop new products and explain the product development process. Explain what is involved in production management and describe the activities that are part of distribution management.

Essential Questions

Essential Question - In what ways do entrepreneurs develop products differently from large companies? What do you need to know about managing the production of your product?
