Enduring Understandings

Artists fill their space in a variety of ways, referring to the areas around, between, or within components of art.

Artists understand that space can be positive or negative, open or closed, shallow or deep, and two-dimensional or three-dimensional.

Artists create depth and perspective to show space in the natural world around them.

Artists use balance to create a sense of stability, where no one part overpowers another.

Artists gain an understanding of the terms foreground, middle ground, and background.

Artists use specific tools and materials to produce artworks for specific purposes.

Artists produce artwork to communicate a variety of needs and ideas.

Artists reflect ideas from different cultures, movements, and artists from the past.

Artists apply the use of discovery by asking questions and seeking answers about artworks, and the artists who made them.

Artists demonstrate comprehension of a common art vocabulary.

Artists exhibit artwork to communicate and/or express their ideas.

Artists apply the use of thinking skills and critical analysis by explaining and critiquing their own works of art.

Artists use descriptive words to communicate ideas and feelings about both their own artworks and art in the world around them.

Artists participate in dialogue that encourages the development of decision making skills.
