

Unit 3: On Deadline

Content Area: Language Arts Literacy
Course(s): Print Journalism 1, Print Journalism 2, Print Journalism 3, Print Journalism 4
Time Period: November
Length: 10 blocks
Status: Published

Transfer Skills

---

Produce clear and coherent writing in which the development, organization, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience

Enduring Understandings

---

News does not unfold all at once but, rather, in chunks.

A story is what the reporter makes of it.

The facts should always get in the way of a good story.

Getting a story right is as important as getting it written.

Journalists are reporters first and writers second.

Elections garner coverage throughout the year but intensify at the end.

Essential Questions

---

How do journalists determine the most essential pieces of information to report to their audience?

How do reporters get the point across with so little time and such a small margin for error?

What can reporters do to shorten the time between the news event and publication?

How do reporters cut down on factual as well as mechanical errors?

How can we simulate and practice the reporting of news?

Content

Sources, bias, journalists vs. reporters, margin for error
