Enduring Understandings
Media institutions have their own unique hierarchy.
While roles and descriptions may vary by media outlet, the responsibilities are essentially the same.
The responsibilities in journalism are compounded by deadlines.
How the responsibilities are fulfilled determines the overall effectiveness of the media organization.
There will always be differences in opinion in how to cover, report and write the news.
Essential Questions
Who reports to whom at a media institution?
What are the roles at a media institution and what do they entail?
Who is responsible for what at a media institution?
How do reporters, editors, copy editors, photographers, fact-checkers, etc., perform their duties under extreme deadline pressure?
What are the organizational and functional differences between different types of media (i.e. print, TV, radio, Internet, etc.)?

How are daily, weekly, monthly publications organized?
