Essential Questions

- In what way is cultural information transmitted to subsequent generations?
- How much of what we know about history is an accurate representation of people's stories?
- How does literature reflect its cultural and temporal setting?
- How does religion shape and reinforce cultural mores?

Application of Knowledge: Students will know that...

- Indigenous Italian practices were important to religious practices in the Roman household
- Ovid wrote many myths that are remembered from the Romans
- Roman children, originally taught by their fathers only, in later years were taught by slaves (mostly from Greece)
- Roman female dress also included a tunic and often jewelry
- Roman male dress included a simple tunic and toga for social interactions
- Romans adopted many stories and religious practices from Greek culture
- Romans venerated their ancestors through worship of Vesta, the goddess of the hearth
- Rome's public baths reinforced democratic ideals by placing people of many backgrounds together
- Slaves in Rome were principally of two types: domestic slaves and slaves who worked on "latifundia," which had a high mortality rate and were poorly treated
- The Roman family was headed by the "paterfamilias," who held absolute authority over women, slaves, and children in the household

Application of Skills: Students will be able to...

- Compare their own mode of living to that of others
- Identify the place and importance of religion in enculturation of youth and preservation of traditions
- Interpret mythology's representation of a people's values and worldview
- Recognize the vestiges of patriarchy in modern society
- Recognize themes in poetry

Assessments

---

- Quiz over relevant vocabulary (paterfamilias, latifundia, toga praetexta, tunic, amphitheater, etc.)
- Models of Roman baths, other public gathering places
- Diary entries from the perspective of various groups (domestic slaves, slaves on latifundia, women, children, etc.)
- Venn diagram comparing patriarchy now and in ancient Rome
- Information from this unit will be included on a locally developed, end of course benchmark assessment that may take the form of a test, performance based project, or other summative assessment.

Suggested Activities

- Journal entries reflecting on excerpts of Roman authors
- Create drawings/diagrams of Roman dress
- Role-play visit to Roman baths
- Read Roman poetry in choral, round-robin fashion
