Course Overview

The first grade social studies curriculum continues to introduce students to the wider world around them. There is a major focus throughout the year on helping students become cognizant of how their community works through examining areas such as qualities of a good citizen, exploring their world, and looking at the work that people do to contribute to our larger community.

Units in the first grade curriculum are taught on an ongoing basis throughout the school year. The curriculum is purposely fluid so that teachers can make it as relevant to events that occur throughout the year and therefore more meaningful as students look to make sense of the world around them.
