Unit Overview

The 1900's brought the promise of greater freedom and opportunity to more people in New Jersey. Women won the right to vote after years of struggle. The protest of factory workers brought about better working conditions. African Americans gained better jobs and a fairer system of education. In the past few years, New Jerseyans have made improvements to the state and are working to solve the problems of tomorrow. In this unit, students will read and learn about how New Jersey and its population dealt with large events, such as World Wars and the Great Depression, the response that New Jersey had to the Holocaust, and how New Jersey is moving forward in the 21st century to try to improve the world around it.
