Course Overview

The fourth grade physical education curriculum introduces students to a new cadre of games that are meant to encourage a healthy, active lifestyle while teaching core skills such as coordination, cooperation, flexibility, and stamina. Some games in this curriculum, such as soccer and basketball, are continued on from earlier grade levels and students will continue to build their skills and challenge students to move further in their abilities. Other games, such as flag football and net games, are intended to build upon skills learned in earlier years such as throwing and catching and giving meaning to them in a teamwork setting. The fourth and fifth grade curricula are very similar in the content and intended to build students skills in the same games over multiple years as their natural coordination and stamina grow and develop with age.
