Time Period: Marking Period 4
Length: 7-8 Weeks
Status: Published

Unit Overview

In this unit, and book club, students will be strengthening their reading lives, focusing on social issues and themes across texts. Readers will analyze how an author presents an issue, and how characters react and respond to challenges.

In Bend One of the unit, students will learn to notice the issues that exist in the world and their texts. Students will delve into books looking for problems and injustices that don't just affect the character, that don't just affect the reader, but that do affect entire groups of people in their communities and beyond. They'll learn about these issues by reading stories and articles, noticing the perspective the author takes on to explore these issues, noticing connections between issues, and comparing and contrasting how different characters deal with problems to teach readers important lessons about these topics.

In Bend Two, the students will build on this foundation by giving students the opportunity to explore issues by reading and responding to multiple pieces of literature with a specific lens (task). Students will begin to closely study and analyze how different authors approach similar social issues. They will develop questions based on their point of view about an issue and analyze these texts with a critical eye to develop themes and questions around similar social issues. They will learn to talk with the text as a foundation to support their discussion points. By the end of Bend Two, students will be finished with their book club book.

In Bend Three, the students will branch out of their book club to explore themes from other book club texts. They will consider and discuss universal social issues that apply to the real world and how the text(s) supports these themes. The students will compare and contrast theme(s) across multiple texts through an in depth analysis through multiple texts.

Essential Questions

- How do we interpret and analyze social issues and themes?
- How do discussions with peers help me think critically about text, and grow new ideas?
- How can I read to explore a variety of issues that exist in the world and understand the different perspectives?

Application of Knowledge: Students will know that...

- good readers don’t read just to find out what characters do or what happens in stories. Powerful readers also realize that the stories we read are about ideas-they literally teach us how to live.
- readers find issues in a story by asking “What does this story teach me?”
- readers look at anything they read and wonder how hidden and subtle sources of power, race, class, and gender operate in our culture.

- readers write and talk about issues they can relate to in their own lives, each of us is a member of many groups-how does that group identity shape us?
- repetition is a tool that is not only used in poetry but in literature as well and it's not just objects that may be repeated in a text, sometimes it is lines, and parallel scenes or moments. When we read with a lens, first we read for the story, for what happens, and then we read asking what does this story teach us about (the social issue)?

Application of Skills: Students will be able to...

- Be aware of changes within a character and their response to challenges can help interpret complex text.
- Compare and contrast similar issue in different texts and different lives.
- Examine texts to locate issues of different characters.
- See multiple perspectives to an issue; understanding the complexity of it.
- Think about an author's or narrator's viewpoint to influence their understanding of the text.
- Think critically about text(s) to help gain new understanding about themes.
- Understand that a character can represent a larger group of people facing an issue.

Teaching Points and Suggested Activities

Teaching Points

- Today I want to teach you that readers notice big issues within text.
- Today I want to teach you that readers analyze characters' struggles and name them as social issues.
- Today I want to teach you that readers revisit critical scenes in the text to uncover social issues.
- Today I want to teach you that readers think about crucial scenes to uncover what their story is truly about.
- Today I want to teach you that readers realize that texts aren't just about one issue, texts address multiple issues that tug on our hearts.
- Today I want to teach that readers incorporate nonfiction into social issues fiction book clubs.
- Today I want to teach you that readers practice empathy when speaking about social issues.
- Today I want to teach you that readers think about their own representations that can help readers empathize with characters in their stories.
- Today I want to teach you that readers use nonfiction text with their fiction selections to look more critically at a social issue.
- Today I want to teach you that readers look at the craft moves authors use to present a stance on social issues.
- Today I want to teach you that readers compare and contrast how stories in the same genre approach similar themes and topics.

Activities to Support Teaching Points

- create and refer to anchor charts

- study pages from exemplar reader's notebooks
- provide and present mentor texts as models
- teach the Work of Readers Charts
- teach children strategies for holding onto text, for example by using Post-its and graphic organizers

- model, provide, and use a reader's notebook
- tap, sketch, or jot across a story as a way of retaining information and details
- study book introductions and endings
- practice creating mental movies as you read

- write long about reading
- practice alternating the speed a text is read to reflect tone and mood
- plan to celebrate the conclusion of classroom reading projects
- use technology in the reading classroom; for example digital journals

Assessments

Assessment in this unit takes three forms: diagnostic, formative, and summative. The resource Reading Pathways, Grades 3-5, provides reading progressions, performance assessments, rubrics, tools for collecting data, a system for conducting running records, There are also downloadable, digital versions of the assessment tools available through the online resources at; www.readingandwritingproject.org/resources. Teachers may also develop their own rubrics and assessments in order to include more specific elements of knowledge and skills listed in this unit summary.

Student self-assessment and peer assessment should take place whenever possible--again, in all three forms: diagnostic, formative, and summative. Removing the traditional emphasis on teacher assessment enables students to take more initiative and become self-directed.

On-going teacher assessment will take place in the context of a conference. Conferences, both small group and one-to-one conferring, are used to reinforce expectations, provide advice and/or assistance, and ultimately, to support growth.

Activities to Differentiate Instruction

The design of reading workshop allows for individualized instruction and independent growth for every child. At the heart of differentiation in Reader's Workshop is data and the analysis of data. Through the usage of monitoring student progress during independent reading, analysis of formal and informal running records, and other assessments such as high-frequency word lists and spelling inventories, teachers should be able to delineate which students are in need of additional supports, in what areas those supports should be targeted at, and which students are ready to be pushed further in their reading work.

Some methods to use to support struggling readers as well as advanced readers:

- Provide leveled books appropriate for all reading levels
- Provide support as needed through conferencing
- Provide support as needed through strategy groups
- Provide support as needed through guided reading groups
- Provide modified and/or alternate grade level checklists and rubrics to scaffold or stretch learning
- Scaffold or stretch learning through the use of various strategies
- Provide appropriate reading partners
- Utilize charts to provide a visual reminder for students throughout the mini-lesson.
  - Add drawings and visuals to charts
  - Provide individualized copies of teaching charts
  - Depending on the concept, the chart may be most effective to visually break the concept into parts and touch each part during a demonstration
- For students needing more support at the end of the mini-lesson, keep them at the rug for an extra minute after dispersing the rest of the class and clarify the main topic of the mini-lesson or work one-on-one with them to start their reading
- Set reading goals for students and follow-up with the reading goals after an appropriate amount of time.
- Create group and one-on-one conferencing calendars to ensure that students are being met with on a regular basis and working toward individualized goals

- As the unit progresses, the teacher, in coordination with the students, will develop a word wall that will highlight vocabulary specific to the topic chosen
- Assign roles to partners (Partner 1/Partner 2) to help scaffold which student should speak first and avoid one partner dominating the conversation and the other partner becoming a passive listener
  - For ELL students, creating a triad instead of partnership may be beneficial
- Provide students access to RAZ Kids which will provide students more reading options for leveled texts, access to technology, and the ability to have books read to them while they follow along or for students to record their reading

Supports for ELL students:

- Provide consistent teaching structures
- Use consistent teaching language
- Offer plentiful opportunities for reading practice
- Provide access to a broad variety of texts
- Use assessment to provide extra support
- Support students in the preproduction and early production stages of learning English
- Use visual examples in your teaching
- Modify our mini-lessons to be as concise as possible
- Provide extra ?active engagement? time in mini-lessons for extra practice
- Provide readers with topic-based text sets
- Provide opportunities for listening and learning the social language of the reading workshop
- Provide opportunities to read in both their home language and in English
- Plan instruction with the ELL teacher
- Extend the language ELLs are producing through questioning
- Provide explicit instruction in tenses, pronoun references, and connectives
- Support students in building vocabulary using their own reading as the context
- As the unit progresses, the teacher, in coordination with the students, will develop a word wall that will highlight vocabulary specific to the topic chosen

In order to support this differentiation work, teachers may want to consult the following materials:

- Units of Study books at lower or higher levels for teaching strategies that are appropriate to the support needed.
- The Reading Strategies Book by Jennifer Serravallo
- If. . . Then. . . Curriculum book for alternate units or teaching points to support the individual reading levels.
- A Guide to the Reading Workshop (Primary Grades) chapter 14 for more in-depth information on differentiation

Challenge gifted students to incorporate more complex reading techniques based on the 4th grade Reading Learning Progressions:

- base predictions on how stories tend to go, explaining reasons for predictions
- pay attention to structure while reading, note sequence words that may indicate a back-story or gaps in time between scenes
- read complex sentences correctly by paying attention to punctuation
- talk about the big ideas/themes that a story teaches
- support ideas with details from several parts of a text and discuss how the details actually do support those ideas
