

Writing Workshop

Content Area: English Language Arts
Course(s): English Language Arts, Generic District Course
Time Period: Generic Time Period
Length: Weeks
Status: Published

Unit Overview

Students will engage in daily writing in a variety of modes—narrative, expository, persuasive, confessional, and creative.

NOTE: Open-ended questions pertaining to literature require responses that incorporate many of the principles and skills that students learn in Writing Workshop. Indeed, students apply the Writing Workshop model throughout the school year as they write responses to literature-related questions. Instruction and activities related to writing about literature, however, are not included in this unit, but appear prominently in units related to literature.

Assessments

Elective Projects, Cycles 1, 2, and 3

Formative: Personal Project

For each of the three Writing Workshop cycles, the elective project is the first category of writing addressed. Students receive a wide array of ideas from the teacher and from each other. In consultation with their peers and the teacher, each student formulates an idea, proposes a project, and works at his or her pace.

Often, these projects take the form of something that cannot be completed within a two-week time frame. The assessment in such a case would be formative. Depending on the type of project, students may choose to continue working on the same projects in Cycles 2 and 3.

Argumentative/Persuasive Essay, Cycles 1, 2, 3

Summative: Extended Essay

For each of the three Writing Workshop cycles, argumentative and persuasive essays are the second category of writing included.

During each cycle, three pieces are assigned, and students receive an overall score for conscientious completion of the three (see Conscientious Completion Rubric).

One piece of the three is chosen at random, and students receive a score during their summative conferences with the teacher.

ALL SUBMITTED WORK WILL GO INTO INDIVIDUAL STUDENT PORTFOLIOS.

Activities

During the Writing Workshop Orientation:

Students receive, read, and discuss the Style Guidelines.

The teacher explains the general scheme of the year's three Writing Workshop Cycles and how each writing category is addressed in each Cycle.

The teacher explains the daily class scheme: 1) Technical notes/student questions; 2) Writing and conferences; 3) Class discussion of emerging concerns and challenges.

At the Beginning of Each Category in Cycle 1:

Students review and discuss the Style Guidelines.

Students receive guides and samples for the current category of writing. After a class discussion of these materials, students work in their Literature Circle groups in order to discuss the writing assignments for the category. They list and discuss among themselves questions, concerns, and salient challenges. Each group has an opportunity to present these items to the class at large. The teacher facilitates both small- and large-group discussions.

Students receive a deadline for the writing assignment(s) related to the current category.

At the Beginning of Each Category in Cycles 2 and 3:

Students review and discuss the Style Guidelines.

Students review their guides and samples for the current category of writing. They also review their work from the previous cycles. After a class discussion of these materials, students assemble into Literature Circle groups in order to discuss the writing assignments for the category. They list and discuss among themselves questions, concerns, and salient challenges. Students also determine individually what priorities they have for improvement over their work in the last cycle. Each group has an opportunity to present these items to the class at large. The teacher facilitates both small- and large-group discussions.

Students receive a deadline for the writing assignment(s) related to the current category.

Additional Concepts and Instruction:

Advanced writing topics and prompts

Advanced instruction and examples illustrating the concept of voice in various modes of writing

Advanced instruction and examples illustrating the concepts of mood and tone, targeting both to the topic and the audience

Advanced instruction and examples illustrating the fusion of different writing modes, as in narrative and personal

Advanced peer investigation into the literature and reading that influences each student's writing

Advanced investigation of style standards (including concepts from Strunk and White's The Elements of Style) for further refinement of writing conventions

Profile of editorial and publication standards and formats other than MLA (e.g., APA and Chicago)

Investigation into editorial and publication history, illustrating the emergence of modern conventions in writing

Daily Activities

Technical notes: direct instruction and review of topics requested by students or deemed necessary by the teacher.

Writing and conferences: students engage in the writing process; students may request permission to have formative conferences with each other or with the teacher.

Conclusion: students explain difficulties or successes they are having.

Activities to Differentiate Instruction

Instruction for each category of writing is provided verbally and is distributed on paper in the forms of samples, guides, and rubrics.

Students have a variety of options regarding the form of their submissions: they may write out their assignments by hand, they may type their assignments and print them out, or they may submit their work electronically. This accommodates varying tastes and persuasions, and it enables students with poor handwriting to submit a more legible product.

Instruction comes from various sources (direct instruction by teacher, classroom discussion among students in both small and large groups), and subsequent activities occur in various modes (direct practice, peer reviews, formative conferences with the teacher), providing for thorough overlap and a variety of instructional strategies.

Instruction and activities take place in three cycles, providing continuous review and practice throughout the year.

Peer reviews and conferences pair students of varying ability to accommodate styles and facilitate learning.

Individual conferences with the teacher provide enhanced time to attend to individual students' needs.

Integrated/Cross-Disciplinary Instruction

Argumentative/persuasive essay topics often draw from current events, integrating objectives and learning experiences from social studies and science.

Personal essay topics include the interpretation of famous quotes from notable figures in the fields of arts and science, as well as from famous historical people.

Informative essay topics draw from a range of content areas, particularly environmental science and statistics.

Elective projects permit students the freedom to investigate interests across the curriculum.

Editorial and literary history (social studies/world language)

Academic/technical composition and publication examples (mathematics/science)

Scripts, typography, and evolutionary alphabets (world language)
