Activities

- Discuss differences in facial appearances, e.g. skin color, eyes, noses, hair
- Discuss how wrinkles can suggest thinking or worrying
- Look at photographs and discuss how eyebrows and mouth can convey a sense of happiness
- Give students step-by-step instructions to draw a face
- Take a viewing tour: after watching the video about Rembrandt, walk around the room and see the pictures other students drew while watching the video
- Show a series of Rembrandt's Self-Portraits; discuss the exact location of certain physical features
- Discuss with the students the correct use of proportion when drawing portraits
- To complete the "Self-Portrait - Colored In" add a background color
- Read the book Little Dancer to the class and discuss the story
- View Edgar Degas' Little Dancer sculpture; guide the students to see the tiny details of the sculpture, such as the eyebrows, lips, shoes, fingernails, etc.
- Demonstrate how to push, pull, and pinch Model Magic to mold the clay
- Instruct the students to use only small amounts of paint for their "Painted Sculpture"; the student's main objective will be to add a defined layer of clothing to the sculpture, using tempera paint

Activities to Differentiate Instruction

- All students will color a background for their "Self-Portrait - Colored In"; adding some light details to their portrait, such as rivers, mountains, grassy countryside, etc.
- Students may choose to make their sculpture in a standing, sitting, or lying position
- Review and repeat instructions
- Students work at their own pace/teacher-reduced project expectations
- Use proximity control
- Incorporate frequent modeling and prompting

- Use visuals, when possible, to accompany instructions
- Preferential seating

Integrated/Cross-Disciplinary Instruction

Students will take their completed "Painted Sculpture" to language arts class where they will write a short story naming and describing the character they have created. They will also explain in what activity the character is engaged.
