Assessments

- Feelings/Emotion Management Pre-Test Diagnostic: Instructional/Assessment Focus After viewing a picture book with drawings/photographs of different strong emotions, students will identify each emotion and will explain why the individuals may be expressing it.
- Calming Down Role-Play Summative: Dramatization In small groups, role-play an emotional situation and demonstrate strategies for calming down.
- Waiting List Summative: Visual Arts Project In small groups, students will brainstorm and draw activities on butcher paper that they can engage in while they wait for a turn.
- Emotion Management Picture Test Formative: Other visual assessments Students will view drawings/pictures of different emotions and correctly identify each feeling.

Activities

- "Impulsive Puppy" and "Slow Down Snail": A story about how emotions can have physical manifestations. Students will listen to the story and describe how they feel and why.
- Strong Emotions Game: A teacher-made board game in which students will respond to prompts to move across the board.
- Student Strategies: Students will compile a list of three ways to calm down.
- Calming Down Handout: A worksheet describing six different ways to calm down.
- Calming Down Picture Prompts: Pictures of children using calm-down techniques. Students will identify the strategy each is using and why the person might need to calm down.
- Calm Down Pictures: Students will draw something that helps them calm down.
- Waiting Sheets: Students will create waiting sheets for different parts of the room to help them recall the skill of waiting for an area or activity.
- The Waiting Game Reading: A short story about waiting and how to wait appropriately.
- Disappointed Role Play: In a large circle, students will be given prompts about disappointment. They will share their ideas about how to handle disappointment.
- The Anger Song: A lyric sheet and CD that helps students understand the origin of anger and ways to handle anger.
- Anger Skit: A role-play in which students learn about "tense" and "relaxed" through simulation using cooked and uncooked spaghetti.
- Anger Body Outlines: With a partner, students outline their bodies and draw angry faces on their bodies. They write or draw what makes them angry.

Activities to Differentiate Instruction

- Students draw pictures of "Impulsive Puppy" and "Slow Down Snail" to help demonstrate strong emotions.
- Students practice good calming-down behaviors and are rewarded with "Heart" stickers. Children set a goal to get as many heart stickers as possible.
- Students receive individual counseling to build strategies/techniques to calm down.
- Play Anger Song during free time.

Integrated/Cross-Disciplinary Instruction

- Language Arts connection: Students list descriptive words that relate to strong feelings.
- Social Studies connection: Students role-play being the president and using calm-down strategies.
