Enduring Understandings

Students will understand the following:

The purpose of art varies based on the artist.

Moralistic art was largely valued in the Victorian Era, but Wilde publicly preferred Aestheticism.

Youth, beauty, and pleasure do not ultimately fulfill people on a personal level.

We suffer psychologically when we neglect our morality.

Individuals write within a particular situation and make strategic writing choices based on that situation.

Writers make claims about subjects, rely on evidence that supports the reasoning that justifies the claim, and often acknowledge or respond to other, possibly opposing arguments.

Writers guide understanding of a text's line of reasoning and claims through that text's organization and integration of evidence.

The rhetorical situation informs the strategic stylistic choices that writers make.

Essential Questions

What is the purpose of art?

Why are youth, beauty, and pleasure so tempting?

How do we maintain our morality in a shallow society?

How do writers make strategic choices based on particular situations to prove an argument?

How do we determine the speaker's subject, claim, and evidence within a piece? How do we determine the validity of the subject's argument in that piece?

How do we follow a line of reasoning within a nonfiction text?

What effect does the rhetorical situation have on stylistic choices the writer makes?
