Enduring Understandings

Race, ethnicity, and nationality have and continue to be complicated issues whose meanings and importance changes through history.

Every nation has made controversial choices and mistakes throughout history. It is important to reflect upon these moments as we move forward as a planet.

Fear and xenophobia can pit neighbor against neighbor, friend against friend.

Japanese, American, and Japanese-American are labels whose meanings are subjective and constructed by humans; how we choose to apply those labels can have nefarious implications.

Individuals write within a particular situation and make strategic writing choices based on that situation.

Writers make claims about subjects, rely on evidence that supports the reasoning that justifies the claim, and often acknowledge or respond to other, possibly opposing arguments.

Writers guide understanding of a text’s line of reasoning and claims through that text’s organization and integration of evidence.

The rhetorical situation informs the strategic stylistic choices that writers make.

Essential Questions

What are civil liberties, and why do we defend them?

What does the experience of war do to people and their values?

What is home, and how do people adapt to change?

How do writers make strategic choices based on particular situations to prove an argument?

How do we determine the speaker's subject, claim, and evidence within a piece? How do we determine the validity of the subject's argument in that piece?

How do we follow a line of reasoning within a nonfiction text?

What effect does the rhetorical situation have on stylistic choices the writer makes?

Knowledge and Skills

Learn about Proclamation 9066 signed by FDR in 1942 ordering the internment of Japanese living in the United States and Japanese-American citizens.

Understand the apparent willingness of Japanese Americans to accept and follow Proclamation 9066.

Examine the journey to the internment camps and the treatment of the people by the US government while they were interned.

Evaluate the utility of the camps and how this event is viewed through a historical lens.

Examine how syntax and isolating imagery of the external setting reflect the internal feelings of characters in the novel.
