Enduring Understandings

Students will understand the following:

The American Dream has meant different things to different people over the years.

Writers will often write about what they know and what is meaningful to them.

Recurring themes will be found in plays, poems, novels, short stories, and nonfiction.

One's background and experiences will determine how one resolves struggles and overcomes adversity.

Individuals write within a particular situation and make strategic writing choices based on that situation.

Writers make claims about subjects, rely on evidence that supports the reasoning that justifies the claim, and often acknowledge or respond to other, possibly opposing arguments.

Writers guide understanding of a text's line of reasoning and claims through that text's organization and integration of evidence.

The rhetorical situation informs the strategic stylistic choices that writers make.

Essential Questions

What is the American Dream?

Why do authors blend personal experience into their art?

How do texts "talk" to each other?

How do gender, class and age influence characters' different reactions to their shared conflict?

How do writers make strategic choices based on particular situations to prove an argument?

How do we determine the speaker's subject, claim, and evidence within a piece? How do we determine the validity of the subject's argument in that piece?

How do we follow a line of reasoning within a nonfiction text?

What effect does the rhetorical situation have on stylistic choices the writer makes?

Knowledge and Skills

Students will be able to do the following:

Students will learn about how Greek theatre influences modern day performance.

Students will be able to discuss the role of a chorus in Greek tragedy as a means to convey the significance of scenes.

Students will understand that ancient Greek theatre is not only a form of entertainment but also a source of moral and religious instruction.

Students will consider how decisions made in leadership roles can influence both personal and public outcomes.
