SOC.6.1.12.HistoryUP.3.a	Determine how expansion created opportunities for some and hardships for others by considering multiple perspectives over different time periods (e.g., Native American/European, Native American/White settlers, American/Latin American, American/Asian).
SOC.6.1.12.HistoryUP.3.b	Examine a variety of sources from multiple perspectives on slavery and evaluate the claims used to justify the arguments.
SOC.6.1.12.HistoryCA.3.b	Use primary sources representing multiple perspectives to explain the impact of immigration on American society and the economy and the various responses to increased immigration.
SOC.6.3.12.CivicsHR.1	Compare current case studies involving slavery, child labor, or other unfair labor practices in the United States with those of other nations and evaluate the extent to which these human rights violations are a universal problem. Complex interacting factors influence people's perspective. Maps, satellite images, photographs, and other representations can be used to explain relationships between the locations of places and regions, and changes in their environmental characteristics.

Civics, Government, and Human Rights: Human and Civil Rights

Evidence from multiple relevant historical sources and interpretations can be used to develop a reasoned argument about the past.

Resources impact what is produced and employment opportunities.

Economic globalization affects economic growth, labor markets, human rights guarantees, the environment, resource allocation, income distribution, and culture.

Social and political systems throughout time have promoted and denied civic virtues and democratic principles.

Governments around the world support universal human rights to varying degrees.

To better understand the historical perspective, one must consider historical context.

Civic and political institutions address social and political problems at the local, state, tribal, national, and/or international level.

Civics, Government, and Human Rights: Participation and Deliberation

Global interconnections create complex spatial patterns at multiple scales that continue to change over time.

Historical events and developments were shaped by the unique circumstances of time and place as well as broader historical contexts.

Advancements in technology and investments in capital goods and human capital increase economic growth and standards of living.

Civic participation and deliberation are essential characteristics of productive citizenship.

Enduring Understandings

1. Intensified by expansion and deepening regional divisions, debates over slavery and other economic, cultural, and political issues led the nation into civil war.

A. Substantial numbers of new international migrants—who often lived in ethnic communities and retained their religious, language, and customs—entered the country prior to the Civil War, giving rise to a major, often violent nativist movement that was strongly anti-Catholic and aimed at limiting immigrants’ cultural influence and political and economic power.

B. The institution of slavery and its attendant ideological debates, along with regional economic and demographic changes, territorial expansion in the 1840s and 1850s, and cultural differences between the North and the South, all intensified sectionalism.

C. States’ rights, nullification, and racist stereotyping provided the foundation for the Southern defense of slavery as a positive good.

2. Repeated attempts at political compromise failed to calm tensions over slavery and often made sectional tensions worse, breaking down the trust between sectional leaders and culminating in the bitter election of 1860, followed by the secession of southern states.

A. National leaders made a variety of proposals to resolve the issue of slavery in the territories, including the Compromise of 1850, the Kansas-Nebraska Act, and the Dred Scott decision, but these ultimately failed to reduce sectional conflict.

- Students will determine, through media literacy skills and lateral, close reading strategies when evaluating primary and secondary resources the following: 1. context of the text; 2. reason for the text; 3. type of source the text is; 4. the point of view of the author of the text 5. the intended audience for the text 6. evaluate the stance of the text
- Students will use Historical Thinking Skills to evaluate sources and ideas. Comparison, Contextualization, Continuity and Change over Time, Periodization, Synthesis, Claims, Point of View, Intended Audience, and Purpose.
- Students will observe, note, and draw conclusions with the understanding that there are multiple perspectives. Multiple perspectives is the foundation to understanding the why and how of history. Documents, primary sources, historical readings will be evaluated.
