Enduring Understandings

Students will understand the following:

Storytelling is a reflection of life and it draws on memory to connect the past and present.

Personal experiences from war can drive both fiction and nonfiction.

Heroism and courage are abstract in their nature within war literature.

Truth within fiction is subjective and can be manipulated by the author for his/her own creative purposes.

Essential Questions

How does Tim O'Brien define the art of storytelling?

Why is the soldier's story an important aspect of the American experience?

How do courage and cowardice corrupt the individual?

What is truth?

Knowledge and Skills

Through reading Tim O'Brien's The Things They Carried, students will study the theme of storytelling as a way to connect the past, specifically the experience of the Vietnam War, to the present.

Students will demonstrate their understanding of the text on four levels: factual, interpretive, critical, and personal.

Students will explore the relationship between author, narrator, and character to uncover the role of stories and storytellers in society.

Students will write about their own experiences using the narrative power of storytelling.

Students will examine cultural mythologies, legend, or folklore to understand the deep human need to believe in stories.

Students will study the development of character throughout a novel.

Students will study the development of a story through flashback and lack of a traditional story structure (chronology).

Students will answer questions to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of the main events and characters in The Things They Carried as they relate to the author's theme development.

Students will examine the attitudes of America and Americans to returning veterans from the Vietnam War.

Students will study the basic causes of the Vietnam War and the effects on life in America.
