Enduring Understandings

An individual constructs a personal cultural identity over time.

A primary conflict can be heightened and complicated by additional conflicts that intersect with it.

Dynamic characters convey a range of ideas, values, beliefs, assumptions, biases, and cultural norms.

Essential Questions

How do place, culture, and familial relationships contribute to the development of one's identity?

To what extent is it fair or logical that someone's origin should determine their future?

How does the continuation of a conflict affect plot and character development?

How does a conflict contribute to the meaning of a work as a whole?

Knowledge and Skills

Students will be able to

- -identify and explain what specific textual details reveal about a character, that character's perspective, and that character's motives.
- -Identify and explain how internal and external conflict intersect and drive plot and character development.
- -Understand the ways in which names and naming can influence the ways we perceive ourselves and how others perceive us.
- -Understand how second-generation immigrants negotiate their cultural identity with the pressure to assimilate.

Transfer Goals

Students will independently be able to determine a theme of a text and examine how it is shaped and refined by plot structure and character development.

Students will independently be able to recognize the tensions of second-generation immigrants in negotiating a cultural identity in relation to the pressures to assimilate.
