Enduring Understanding

1. Photographers photograph different subject, yet the result should always be autobiographical as the creativity is about self, not object.
2. Artificial light can be more manipulated than natural light.
3. The studio is a more controlled photo than serendipity of natural occurrences.

Essential Questions

1. What does a photographer photograph?
2. How does a photographer use technology to create photographic art?
3. How does a photographer create meaning in their art?

Knowledge and Skills

- Students will be able to successfully capture documentary images, demonstrating attention to detail, vantage point, and timing.
- Students will be able to plan and compose portraits, considering lighting, framing, detail, and environment.
- Students will be able to create landscape photographs, effectively using natural light to establish mood and convey a message.
- Students will be able to recognize street photography as a form of documentary photography that reflects both personal vision and factual observation.
- Students will be able to plan and create photographs that communicate a message through metaphor, and differentiate between photojournalism and documentary photography by creating images that inform about an event.
- Students will be able to define surrealism and create images or series that present a fairy tale, fantasy, or humorous story, contrasting with realistic narratives.
- Students will be able to plan and create abstract images of concrete objects or scenes using light and distance.
- Students will be able to plan, execute, and create a narrative sequence of images that tell a "day-in-the-life" story.

- Students will be able to bind a series of related photographs (narrative or non-narrative) into a book form.
