Unit Overview

In Period 8 students will examine the development and consequences of the Cold War on both international relations and domestic affairs as well as the political, economic, and social fabric of American society during the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s.

Enduring Understanding

Chapter 27

- As postwar tensions dissolved the wartime alliance between Western democracies and the Soviet Union, the United States developed a foreign policy based on collective security, international aid, and economic institutions that bolstered non-Communist nations.
- Americans debated policies and methods designed to expose suspected communists within the United States even as both parties supported the broader strategy of containing communism.
- Americans debated the merits of a large nuclear arsenal, the military-industrial complex, and the appropriate power of the executive branch in conducting foreign and military policy.

Chapter 28

- Post war decolonization and the emergence of powerful nationalist movements in Asia, Africa, and the Middle East led both sides in the Cold War to seek allies among new nations, many of which remained non-aligned.
- During and after World War II, civil rights activists and leaders, notably Martin Luther King Jr., combated racial discrimination utilizing a variety of strategies, including legal challenges, direct action, and non-violent protest tactics.
- A burgeoning private sector, federal spending, the baby boom, and technological developments helped spur economic growth.
- Mass culture became increasingly homogeneous in postwar years, inspiring challenges to conformity by artists, intellectuals, and rebellious youth.

Chapter 29

- The Cold War fluctuated between periods of direct and indirect military confrontation and periods of mutual coexistence (or detente).
- The three branches of the federal government used measures including desegregation of the armed services, Brown vs. Board of Education, and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to promote greater racial equality.
- Liberalism, based on anticommunism abroad and a firm belief in the efficacy of nonviolence increased after 1965.

Chapter 30

- Ideological, military, and economic concerns shaped the U.S. involvement in the Middle East, with several oil crises in the region eventually sparking attempts at creating a national energy policy.
- Feminist and gay and lesbian activists mobilized behind claims for legal, economic, and social equality.
- Latino, American Indian, and Asian American movements continued to demand social and economic equality and a redress of past injustices.
- The 1970s saw growing clashes between conservatives and liberals over social and cultural issues, the power of the federal government, race, and movements for greater individual rights.
