Unit Overview

In this unit, students will examine the processes that contribute to behavioral change throughout a person's life.

Students will learn the following:

- The Lifespan and Physical Development in Childhood
- Social Development in Childhood
- Cognitive Development in Childhood
- Adolescent Development
- Adulthood and Aging
- Moral Development
- Gender and Sexual Orientation

Enduring Understanding

- Developmental psychology encompasses the study of the behavior of organisms from conception to death.

- Major areas of emphasis in the course include prenatal development, motor development, socialization, cognitive development, adolescence, and adulthood.
- Developmental psychologists seek to understand how changes in our biology and social situations over a lifespan influence our behaviors and mental processes.
- Development can be studied from several different perspectives, including biological or cognitive perspectives.
- Developmental psychologists may focus on one or more developmental periods or the entire course of a lifespan, using cross-sectional and longitudinal research methods.

Essential Questions

- How do we perceive and understand ourselves?

Exit Skills

By the end of Unit 6, the student should be able to:

- Analyze aspects of physiological, cognitive, psychological, and moral development to understand how behavior and mental processes change over the course of a person's life, including the role of adolescent development and the decline of adults as they age.
- Reinforce biological, cognitive, and cultural perspectives studied in earlier units while discussing theories of stage development and continuous development.
- Utilize crosssectional research and longitudinal research designs, which build on the research methods learned in Unit 1.
- Analyze and interpret data through these new research designs and in relation to the specific context of developmental psychology.
- Define and/or apply concepts related to gender and sexual orientation.
- Explain behavior in authentic context related to adolescent behavior.
- Apply theories and perspectives in authentic contexts related to social development in childhood, Cognitive Development in Childhood, and adulthood and aging.

Suggested Activities & Best Practices

- Debate: For example, have students complete the activity Piaget Meets Santa, which can be found online. Have them read the given statements and then match them with the appropriate developmental stage.
- Misconception Check: For example, ask students to predict if a scientific method could test whether babies as young as three months old can tell right from wrong or have morals. Have them watch the segment “The Baby Lab” from 60 Minutes and then ask them to identify the research method and evaluate the ethics of the experiment. Students can then summarize the results of the study and debate whether babies are born with morality using evidence (or the lack thereof) from the study.
- Quickwrite: For example, provide students with a published gender roles experiment and then ask them to identify the research method and evaluate the ethics of the experiment. Have students summarize the results of the study and then design a study that can be conducted as a follow-up.
- Read case studies and psychological experiments related to Unit 6 (For example: “The Sandwich Generation”; “The Development of Imagination”) and respond to related writing tasks using a personal response journal.
- Conduct experiments related to Unit 6 (For example: “Adolescents on Television” Lab; “Peer Pressure” Simulation) and analyze the results using a personal response journal.
- Create cartoons or other illustrations based on human behavior/psychology topics discussed in Unit 6.
- Student or teacher created rubrics for each project.

- Building a portfolio throughout the course; contains experiments and independent projects.
- Complete study guides for Assessment on "Developmental Psychology"
- Use Commonlit.org to reinforce standardized tests strategies.
- Working with a partner, create a chart that summarizes the physical, mental, and social issues of young adulthood, middle adulthood, and late adulthood.
- Identify a local program that seeks to promote children's intellectual development. Observe the program and write a summary explaining your observations.
- In small groups, construct an imaginary situation in which a moral judgment must be made. Write out the scenario that the group created. Read the scenario to a young child, adolescent, and adult and record their responses. Compare their responses to Kohlberg's levels and stages of moral development.
- Review or reread the short story version of Flowers for Algernon that features an adolescent as it's main character. As you review or reread, connect the character to information learned in class about adolescent development and the challenges of adolescence. Write a profile of the character exploring these issues.
- With several students, create and conduct a survey to assess currently held gender stereotypes in your community. Develop a questionnaire in regards to what people think in terms of gender roles and the behaviors that they think are appropriate. Give the questionnaire to specific groups of people. Analyze the survey findings and prepare an oral report to present to the class.
