Unit Overview

In this unit students will analyze the rule of law and how the rule of law forms the basis for criminal law in the U.S. Students will learn the differences between civil and criminal law and how criminal laws are made. Students will discover the sources of criminal law and the legal elements of a crime. Students will then analyze and define various types of crimes and criminal behavior. Students will learn about classifications of crimes and identify and classify crimes.

Enduring Understanding

There can be no crime without law. If an act is to be prohibited, a legally authoritative body (such as Congress or a state legislature) must spell out in advance what behavior is banned. Criminal law serves several purposes and benefits society by maintaining order, resolving disputes, protecting individuals and property, and safeguarding civil liberties. Students will begin to realize the need for consequences for criminal behavior.
