Unit Overview

Desserts include cookies, cakes, pies, frozen desserts, and puddings. Cookies vary in ingredient measurements, in mixing methods and baking times. The five types of cakes have two basic categories of batter with different mixing methods. Flaky and mealy pie doughs are chosen for different types of fillings; fruit, custard, and cream. Baked goods require strict ingredient measurement and ingredient ratio. Although frozen desserts do not require strict ingredient measuring, they do offer a wide range of variety, from ice cream to sherbet. It takes skill to make desserts with a high quality appearance, texture and taste. Plating desserts attractively can bring a glamorous ending to a great meal.
