Unit Overview

Within this unit, students will read about concepts such as new perspectives, better together, our changing earth, now we know, and scientific viewpoints. Students will read various nonfiction genres and cover reading strategies to best help them understand this type of text.

Enduring Understandings

Students will understand that...

- depending on which perspective you view something, your experience can change the way you see yourself and the world around you.
- when times get tough, people have to rely on each other to help them adapt to changing situations. Even small gestures can help.
- Earth is in a constant state of change. Some changes, such as a volcano erupting, may happen quickly while other changes are gradual.
- as researchers design new technologies and evaluate new ideas, our criteria for knowledge changes.
- we are surrounded by many species of plants and animals that are not native to the area they live in. When changes occur within the environment, plants and animals adapt so that they can survive.
- there are many ways that things can change. Change can occur organically or change can be man-made.

Essential Questions

- What experiences can change the way you see yourself and the world around you?
- How do shared experiences help people adapt to change?
- What changes in the environment affect living things?
- How can scientific knowledge change over time?
- How do natural events and human activities affect the environment?
- In what ways can things change?

Exit Skills

By the end of Unit 5: What's Next?, students should be able to...

- make inferences.
- cite text evidence to support answers.
- find the theme of a text.
- summarize.
- recognize and identify story elements: character, setting, plot.
- ask and answer questions about a text.
- demonstrate understanding of text structure (cause and effect, compare and contrast).
- demonstrate knowledge of taught skills and strategies of the unit.
- expand on knowledge of vocabulary.
- use key details to find the main idea.
- describe how the author supports opinions in the text.
- write sentences using dependent and independent clauses.
