Art History Part 2 will provide students with an introduction to college coursework in art history. Essential Questions/Enduring Understandings

How and why did so many Modernist artistic styles and movements develop in the early 20th century?

How did the works of Freud and Jung impact the development of art and the concept of what an artist is?

The political, social, and economic conditions that led to WWI and the war itself relate to the art of the times?

How did advancements in photography and the invention of filmmaking change the world of art?

Early 20th century modernist artists consciously allied themselves with trends and promises of contemporary life, embraced the swift pace of the present. They strove to make art that would respond to pace of the times and enlarged upon its implications through new modes of expression including destruction of past concepts of art. The result of their efforts was the rapidly changing face of art through a myriad of artistic styles and movements within the scope of Modernism.

The theories of Freud promoted growing interest in the individual expression of the artist, while those of Jung tied the individual artist to the collective human condition.

The political, social, and economic conditions that led to WWI and the war itself inspired and supported art that made social and political commentary.

The development of filmmaking introduced a new medium of artistic exploration that would reach the masses.

Creativity and innovative thinking are essential life skills that can be developed. Artists and designers shape artistic investigations, following or breaking with traditions in pursuit of creative art-making goals.

What conditions, attitudes and behaviors support creativity and innovative thinking? What factors prevent or encourage people to take creative risks? How does collaboration expand the creative process? How does knowing the contexts, histories and traditions of art forms help us create works of art and design? Why do artists follow or break from established traditions? How do artists determine what resources and criteria are needed to formulate artistic investigations?

Artists and designers experiment with forms, structures, materials, concepts, media, and art-making approaches. Artists and designers balance experimentation and safety, freedom and responsibility, while developing and creating artworks. People create and interact with objects, places and design that define, shape, enhance, and empower their lives.

How do artists work? How do artists and designers determine whether a particular direction in their work is effective? How do artists and designers learn from trial and error? How do artists and designers care for and maintain materials, tools and equipment? Why is it important, for safety and health, to understand and follow correct procedures in handling materials, tools and equipment? What responsibilities come with the freedom to create? How do objects, places and design shape lives and communities? How do artists and designers determine goals for designing or redesigning objects, places or systems? How do artists and designers create works of art or design that effectively communicate?

Individual aesthetic and empathetic awareness developed through engagement with art can lead to understanding and appreciation of self, others, the natural world, and constructed environments. Visual arts influences understanding of and responses to the world.

How do life experiences influence the way you relate to art? How does learning about art impact how we perceive the world? What can we learn from our responses to art? What is visual art? Where and how do we encounter visual arts in our world? How do visual arts influence our views of the world?

People develop ideas and understandings of society, culture and history through their interactions with and analysis of art.

How does art help us understand the lives of people of different times, places and cultures? How is art used to impact the views of a society? How does art preserve aspects of life?
