As theatre is created and experienced, personal experiences and knowledge are synthesized to interpret meaning and analyze the way in which the world may be understood.

What happens when theatre artists allow an understanding of themselves and the world to inform perceptions about theatre and the purpose of their work?

Objectives

Students will know:

- Students will be skilled at determining the intentions of a character and use it to get what the character wants.
- how a series of scenes form a play.
- how to use the given text to develop a believable and authentic character.
- the historical context of the play and character.

Students will be skilled at:

- analyzing a character within the structure of the play.
- determining objectives, beats, actions, and helpful business within a scene.
- memorization techniques for learning lines and blocking.
- decontextualizing a scene to make it relevant to an uninformed audience.

Learning Plan

- Model the Stanislavski Method and how to apply it to any realistic scene.
- Students find scenes from television and movie and work to adapt them to the stage.
- Students apply the Stanislavski Method to these scenes, submitting marked up scripts.
- Review memorization techniques.
- Students switch roles for a day and discuss what they learned about their character by playing their partner's.
- Students are assigned a short scene from a published script to be analyzed, memorized, and performed during the midterm.

- Discuss cold reads and model their effectiveness.
- Cold read a full script as a class.
- Assign scenes from this script.
- Repeat above steps on a faster timeline.
- Students perform exercises to connect with their partners on a deeper level.
- Students perform scenes at the Spring Acting Showcase.

Assessments

- Students will be assessed on their application of the Stanislavski Method at least three times during the course.
- Students will receive regular feedback at scene presentations throughout the course.
- Students will be assessed on their commitment and understanding of the cold read.
- Students will be assessed at the Spring Acting Showcase based on clarity of beats, dramatic arc, preparedness, and vocal quality.
