Enduring Understandings

- Safe and sustainable projection begins with control of deep muscles such as the diaphragm
- Annunciation focuses on opening upper muscles such as the throat and palate to let sound travel freely
- Characters are often portrayed physically through posture, gait, and gestures

Students Will Know/ Students Will be Skilled At

Students will know:

- Where the diaphragm is and what it is used for
- Which muscles in their face assist with annunciation
- How posture, gait, and gesture inform an audience's view of a character

Students will be skilled at:

- Use their diaphragm to project their voice
- Relax their jaw and facial muscles to ensure greater diction

- Portray basic caricatures through physicality

Learning Plan

- Discuss essential questions
- Demonstrate safe and unsafe projection (i.e. projection vs. yelling vs. screaming)
- Experiment with sound and pitch - are some pitches easier to project than others?
- Experiment with facial muscles - How does the voice change when smiling, frowning, clenching, or widening?
- Locate the diaphragm by activating the core - make bellies firm
- Have students take turns projecting from the stage and assess how far back their voice is carrying by having students seated strategically throughout the space
- Experience how physicality informs character - limps, hunches, straight spines
- Have students pick a favorite character and use a 20 questions style format as students must mime answers to questions such as “old or young”, “good or evil”, “strong or weak”.
- Create a crowd scene using the full class where each student is portraying a different character physically

Evidence/ Performance Tasks

Fine and Performing Arts students demonstrate differentiated proficiency according to their ability to answer the essential questions through formative and summative assessments. Evidence of progression may be demonstrated in divergent ways through the Artistic Processes of Creating, Performing/ Presenting/ Producing, Connecting, and Responding.

- Discussion of essential questions
- Observation of understanding through voice work and practice
- Discussion and demonstration of projection, diction, and characterization
- Projection of voice to the back of the house
- Nonverbal responses to the 20 questions activity

- Presentation of the crowd scene and specificity of characterization
- Turn and talk
- Self-assessment
- Student explanation of what they see and feel
- Independence assessed by grade level

Materials

The materials used in this course allow for integration of a variety of instructional, supplemental, and intervention materials that support student learners at all levels in the school and home environments. Associated web content and media sources are infused into the unit as applicable and available.
