Content Area: Template
Course(s):
Time Period: Full Year
Length: Full Year
Status: Published

UNIT RATIONALE

The primary focus of this unit is to identify places students like to go and activities they like to do when they are not in school. This includes recreational activities, sports, parties, and celebrations. This unit introduces the verb IR as well as simple future. This unit will also discuss the perspective of free time and the similarities and differences between a typical US household and that of a typical Hispanic home.

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS

Can I identify places in the community? Can I describe activities in which I like to engage? Can I use simple future to describe what I will be doing this weekend? Can I differentiate between the verb jugar and tocar? What are some of the differences and similarities between the way American students spend their free time and that of the typical student from a Spanish-speaking country? Can I introduce myself and describe my likes and dislikes to a new student?

STANDARDS

NEW JERSEY STUDENT LEARNING STANDARDS: CONTENT AREA

New Jersey (NJSLS) - World Languages - Novice Mid (2020)

7.1.NM.IPRET.4

Report on the content of short messages that they hear, view, and read in predictable culturally authentic materials.

PRE-ASSESSMENTS

Successful completion of the prior unit will serve as a scaffolded pre-assessment that will be used to determine depth in pace of the current unit

INSTRUCTIONAL PLAN

MODULE 1

In order to create a routine and establish student expectations, each lesson in each unit will follow a similar pattern. Daily objectives will be visible in the classroom and identifiable each day. Students will be engaged through a variety of activities that include reading, writing, listening, and speaking. Each lesson will include group practice, as well as time for individual student practice. Each day will include formative assessments including exit tickets or other types of assessments that allow for evaluation of the lesson. Subsequent lessons will incorporate a review or reteach as identified by formative assessments.

Student Learning Intentions (SLI) WALT: (We are learning to...)

Student will be able to identify places in the community and describe activities in which they like to engage. Students will be able to describe what they would like to do this weekend. Students will be able to differentiate between the verbs jugar and tocar. Students will be able to identify the typical afterschool activities of a student from a Spanish-speaking country, and compare and contrast it with what the typical American student does. Student will be able to introduce themselves and describe their likes and dislikes to a new student.

requirements for Spanish-speaking students, as well as individualized advanced activities.

English Language Learners

Native language support: The teacher provides auditory or written content to students in their native language.

Adjusted Speech: The teacher changes speech patterns to increase student comprehension. This could include facing the students, paraphrasing, clearly indicating the most important ideas, and speaking more slowly.

Visuals: The teacher uses graphics, pictures, visuals, and manipulatives. This helps ELL students better understand and comprehend the subjects at hand.

Front-Loading Vocabulary: The teacher front loads vocabulary. This means providing students with a list of important vocabulary words they will need to know for a book, lesson, etc. prior to the lesson being taught. Including pictures to go with the vocabulary words is also very beneficial for the students.

Special Education Students

Chunking: The teacher presents information in a way that makes it easy for students to understand and remember. Chunking is based on the presumption that our working memory is easily overloaded by excessive detail. The best way to deliver information is to organize it into meaningful units. Because students with special needs get overloaded easily, chunking is an effective strategy to use with them.

Checking for Understanding: It is important to constantly check for understanding, especially for students who have accommodations. Teachers want to make sure students understand the concepts being covered in a way that makes sense to them.

Extra time: The teacher provides students with special needs extra time to complete work or answer questions. It is important to give students enough time to process their thoughts.

Oral Reading: The teacher will read work orally to students. Class work such as tests and literature circles may need to be read aloud to the student.

Timers: The teacher will use timers as an instructional tool. The use of timers is beneficial for students who have trouble completing tasks. Timers can be helpful so the student is aware of how much time they have to complete an assignment.

Students with 504 Plans

Chunking: The teacher presents information in a way that makes it easy for students to understand and remember. Chunking is based on the presumption that our working memory is easily overloaded by excessive detail. The best way to deliver information is to organize it into meaningful units. Because students with special needs get overloaded easily, chunking is an effective strategy to use with them.

Checking for Understanding: It is important to constantly check for understanding, especially for students who have accommodations. Teachers want to make sure students understand the concepts being covered in a way that makes sense to them.

Extra time: The teacher provides students with special needs extra time to complete work or answer questions. It is important to give students enough time to process their thoughts.

Gifted & Talented Strategies

Extensions/Enrichments: Teachers will provide gifted and talented students with extension/enrichment projects. Students will be challenged to further their understanding, to apply acquired knowledge, and/or to produce something in reference to acquired knowledge.

Modify/Change Activities: Teachers will monitor and modify activities to accommodate those students who need to be challenged further. Additional reading, problem-solving, writing, or project work is necessary for those students who are ready to move on at a rate more accelerated than their peers. In this way, G & T students are provided the same opportunity for support as special needs students.

Students at Risk of School Failure

Directions or Instructions: Make sure directions and/or instructions are given in limited numbers. Give directions/instructions verbally and in simple written format. Ask students to repeat the instructions or directions to ensure understanding occurs. Check back with the student to ensure he/she hasn't forgotten.

Peer Support: Peers can help build confidence in other students by assisting in peer learning. Many teachers use the 'ask 3 before me' approach. This is fine, however, a student at risk may have to have a specific student or two to ask. Set this up for the student so he/she knows who to ask for clarification before going to you.

Alternate or Modified

Assignments: Always ask yourself, "How can I modify this assignment to ensure the students at risk are able to complete it?" Sometimes you'll simplify the task, reduce the length of the assignment or allow for a different mode of delivery. For instance, many students may hand something in, the at-risk student may jot notes and give you the information verbally. Or, it just may be that you will need to assign an alternate assignment.

Increase One to One Time: When other students are working, always touch base with your students at risk and find out if they're on track or needing some additional support. A few minutes here and there will go a long way to intervene as the need presents itself. Contracts: It helps to have a working contract between you and your students at risk. This helps prioritize the tasks that need to be done and ensure completion happens. Each day write down what needs to be completed, as the tasks are done, provide a checkmark or happy face. The goal of using contracts is to eventually have the student come to you for completion sign-offs.

REFLECTIONS

INTERDISCIPLINARY CONNECTIONS: NEW JERSEY STUDENT LEARNING STANDARDS FOR ELA, SOCIAL STUDIES, SCIENCE AND/OR MATHEMATICS

This unit includes interdisciplinary connections with math, science, and social studies. It incorporates a review of basic numbers, as well as the calendar. It also includes cultural comparisons between Hispanic culture and that of local culture. It also identifies elements of Hispanic culture in the local community.
