Crosscutting Statements

1. Patterns – Observed patterns in nature guide organization and classification and prompt questions about relationships and causes underlying them.

Patterns of performance of designed systems can be analyzed and interpreted to reengineer and improve the system.

2. Cause and Effect: Mechanism and Prediction – Events have causes, sometimes simple, sometimes multifaceted. Deciphering causal relationships, and the mechanisms by which they are mediated, is a major activity of science and engineering.

Cause and effect relationships can be suggested and predicted for complex natural and human designed systems by examining what is known about smaller scale mechanisms within the system.

Systems can be designed to cause a desired effect.

Changes in systems may have various causes that may not have equal effects.

4. Systems and System Models – A system is an organized group of related objects or components; models can be used for understanding and predicting the behavior of systems.

Systems can be designed to do specific tasks.

6. Structure and Function – The way an object is shaped or structured determines many of its properties and functions.

The functions and properties of natural and designed objects and systems can be inferred from their overall structure, the way their components are shaped and used, and the molecular substructures of its various materials.

7. Stability and Change – For both designed and natural systems, conditions that affect stability and factors that control rates of change are critical elements to consider and understand.

Much of science deals with constructing explanations of how things change and how they remain stable.

Feedback (negative or positive) can stabilize or destabilize a system.

Connections to the Nature of Science: Most Closely Associated with Crosscutting Concepts Science is a Way of Knowing

Science is both a body of knowledge that represents a current understanding of natural systems and the processes used to refine, elaborate, revise, and extend this knowledge.

Science is a unique way of knowing and there are other ways of knowing.

Science is a Human Endeavor

Scientific knowledge is a result of human endeavor, imagination, and creativity.

Scientists' backgrounds, theoretical commitments, and fields of endeavor influence the nature of their findings.

Science Addresses Questions About the Natural and Material World.

Not all questions can be answered by science.

Many decisions are not made using science alone, but rely on social and cultural contexts to resolve issues.

Knowledge

Students will know...

- The importance of nutrition in muscle and bone repair in general and when competing in a sport. How the use of certain meal plans can promote faster healing.
- Understand the different types of injuries and how nutrition can heal and lessen the chances of severe reinjury.
- Be able to create a sports nutrition plan from case studies and for themselves during training and competition.
- Building a nutrition plan takes knowledge of how the nutrients work in conjunction and allow for maximum performance.
- Learning to overcome barriers that prevent young athletes from maximizing their nutritional intake which allows for them to play longer and better over time.

Skills

Skills

Student will be skilled at ...

- Communicate a comprehension of the need for proper hydration and eating patterns in regards to the repairing stages of an active teens life.
- Collaborate with classmates about best methods of repair methods and foods that have been tried and those that have failed.
- Master an understanding of the healthy literacy available to teen athletes that will give them the prowess to create sports nutrition plans for case studies and themselves.
- Debating different points of available nutrition methods for athletes and comprehend the risks of an array of products being marketed toward teen athletes as "safe" with inherent risks unmentioned.

Formative Assessment Strategies

Formative Assessment Strategies

Students will be responsible for writing a Sports Nutrition Plan for their use in daily living. They will have to understand the importance of why a plan of this nature is important to follow and how it can be adjusted.

They will also have interim times of assessment of case studies to evaluate if a proper Sports Nutrition Plan is being followed properly.

Students will have labs relating to repair foods that help active teens resume normal activity faster. They will be reflecting on the lab and how the dish prepared can be integrated into a daily life.

Learning Activities/Unit of Study

Learning Activities/Unit of Study

- Students will be continuing to work on research project that began in last unit with LMC director. They will continue to comprehend and apply their learning process of the questions they posed and seek help when needed.
- The students will continue to receive discussion questions that will now become self directed response or open class discussions depending on the questions and interest level in the subject material in the course work.
- Continue to demonstrate a understanding of safety protocols and expertise in preparing recipes in lab for tasting and analysis of determination of interest to a teen palette and overall cost and viability of the dish for an active teen.
- Self reflections are in integral part of utilizing differentiated learning in the room to ensure students that are struggling with the coursework can be brought up to speed or have their assignment adjusted to meet their needs.

Modifications and/or Accommodations

Suggested Modifications (ELL, Sp. Ed, Gifted, At-risk of Failure)

English Language Learners

Native language support: The teacher provides auditory or written content to students in their native language.

Adjusted Speech: The teacher changes speech patterns to increase student comprehension. This could include facing the students, paraphrasing, clearly indicating the most important ideas, and speaking more slowly.

Visuals: The teacher uses graphics, pictures, visuals, and manipulatives. This helps ELL students better understand and comprehend the subjects at hand.

Front-Loading Vocabulary: The teacher front loads vocabulary. This means providing students with a list of important vocabulary words they will need to know for a book, lesson, etc. prior to the lesson being taught. Including pictures to go with the vocabulary words is also very beneficial for the students.

Special Education Students

Chunking: The teacher presents information in a way that makes it easy for students to understand and remember. Chunking is based on the presumption that our working memory is easily overloaded by excessive detail. The best way to deliver information is to organize it into meaningful units. Because students with special needs get overloaded easily, chunking is an effective strategy to use with them.

Checking for Understanding: It is important to constantly check for understanding, especially for students who have accommodations. Teachers want to make sure students understand the concepts being covered in a way that makes sense to them.

Extra time: The teacher provides students with special needs extra time to complete work or answer questions. It is important to give students enough time to process their thoughts.

Oral Reading: The teacher will read work orally to students. Class work such as tests and literature circles may need to be read aloud to the student.

Timers: The teacher will use timers as an instructional tool. The use of timers is beneficial for students who have trouble completing tasks. Timers can be helpful so the student is aware of how much time they have to complete an assignment.

Gifted & Talented Strategies

Extensions/Enrichments: Teachers will provide gifted and talented students with extension/enrichment projects. Students will be challenged to further their understanding, to apply acquired knowledge, and/or to produce something in reference to acquired knowledge.

Modify/Change Activities: Teachers will monitor and modify activities to accommodate those students who need to be challenged further. Additional reading, problem-solving, writing, or project work is necessary for those students who are ready to move on at a rate more accelerated than their peers. In this way, G & T students are provided the same opportunity for support as special needs students.

Students at Risk of School Failure

Directions or Instructions: Make sure directions and/or instructions are given in limited numbers. Give directions/instructions verbally and in simple written format. Ask students to repeat the instructions or directions to ensure understanding occurs. Check back with the student to ensure he/she hasn't forgotten.

Peer Support: Peers can help build confidence in other students by assisting in peer learning. Many teachers use the 'ask 3 before me' approach. This is fine, however, a student at risk may have to have a specific student or two to ask. Set this up for the student so he/she knows who to ask for clarification before going to you.

Alternate or Modified Assignments: Always ask yourself, "How can I modify this assignment to ensure the students at risk are able to complete it?" Sometimes you'll simplify the task, reduce the length of the assignment or allow for a different mode of delivery. For instance, many students may hand something in, the at-risk student may jot notes and give you the information verbally. Or, it just may be that you will need to assign an alternate assignment.

Increase One to One Time: When other students are working, always touch base with your students at risk and find out if they're on track or needing some additional support. A few minutes here and there will go a long way to intervene as the need presents itself.

Contracts: It helps to have a working contract between you and your students at risk. This helps prioritize the tasks that need to be done and ensure completion happens. Each day write down what needs to be completed, as the tasks are done, provide a checkmark or happy face. The goal of using contracts is to eventually have the student come to you for completion sign-offs.

Hands On: As much as possible, think in concrete terms and provide hands-on tasks. This means a child doing math may require a calculator or counters. The child may need to tape record comprehension activities instead of writing them. A child may have to listen to a story being read instead of reading it him/herself.

Tests/Assessments: Tests can be done orally if need be. Break tests down in smaller increments by having a portion of the test in the morning, another portion after lunch and the final part the next day.

Seating: Seat students near a helping peer or with quick access to the teacher. Those with hearing or sight issues need to be close to the instruction which often means near the front.
