Rationale

This unit delves into the theme of change through the transformative power of acceptance, utilizing interactive read alouds from Fountas and Pinnell Classroom. Students will explore how acceptance can catalyze significant personal and global changes through reading, writing, and discussions. By the conclusion of the unit, students will proficiently articulate insights into the theme of change, drawing from a diverse array of fiction and non-fiction texts. They will analyze and synthesize elements across texts, crafting purposeful and coherent writing pieces tailored to specific tasks and audiences.

Mastery will be evaluated through a benchmark test assessing students' ability to compare and contrast the structures of fiction and non-fiction texts and analyze multiple perspectives on the same event, considering differing author viewpoints. The unit will further assess students' proficiency in narrative writing, emphasizing their ability to explore topics thoroughly and convey ideas clearly and effectively.

Enduring Understandings

Overarching Understanding

Acceptance is a basic human need that affects how people feel about themselves and how communities work together.

Content Specific	Skills Specific
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Fear can make it hard to accept others, which can stop people from growing and getting along in society. • Not everyone finds complete acceptance, showing that it changes based on personal feelings and gets better or worse. • Wanting to be accepted by friends can make people want to connect and prove they are part of a group. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Readers use what they already know and clues in the text to figure out words they don't know, which helps them understand stories better. • Stories in the same type or style have things in common, which helps readers see what makes them special and tells them apart from other stories. • Stories tell events in order, switch between ideas, use detailed descriptions, and show characters talking to keep readers interested and make sure they understand important ideas like acceptance.

Essential Questions

Overarching Understanding

Why do people need acceptance so much, and what makes them keep looking for it?

Content Specific	Skills Specific
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• What makes people decide to accept others, and how does this show up in their lives and in groups?• How do people feel good about themselves, and what makes this hard to do sometimes?• Is it possible for everyone to feel completely accepted?• In what ways can books and stories help or make it harder for people to feel accepted by others?• What makes it tough for people to accept themselves or each other because of how they feel, act, or where they come from?	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• How do people who read stories use what they know and what the story says to get what new words and phrases mean?• How do stories that are like each other have the same things, and what makes them so easy to tell apart?• How do people who write stories use good ways to tell the story to keep it fun and clear?
