Instructional Strategies & Learning Activities

Text Layout:

Lesson 1: Interactive Read-Aloud

Read, Learn, and Wonder Through Literary Nonfiction uses White Owl, Barn Owl by Nicola Davies.

Rationale: Writers observe how pictures and words are placed on a page, and they notice features of text that provide their readers with clues about what is factual and what is fictional. Students will discover how an Index works and how fonts can be used to differentiate between the factual information and the lyrical language used to share a beautiful story.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, RI.5.1, RI.5.9, SL.5.1

Lesson 2: Mini-Lesson

Terrific Text Features Help Readers uses White Owl, Barn Owl by Nicola

Davies.

Rationale: Writers who use elements of nonfiction in their texts want their readers to enjoy and experience a special story while learning interesting facts. Students will see how to create an Index and will practice using fonts to distinguish fact from fiction in a layout.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, RI.5.1, RI.5.9, SL.5.1, W.5.3

Capitalization:

Lesson 1: Mini-Lesson

Remembering Our Capitalization Rules uses the shared text “Memorial Day.”

Rationale: Writers practice the conventions of capitalization as they write. They consider the rules and apply them in all forms of writing. Students will review the rules for capitalization and apply them to the writing they complete throughout the day.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.2

Punctuation:

Lesson 1: Interactive Read-Aloud

Why Punctuation Marks Count uses Twenty-Odd Ducks by Lynne Truss.

Rationale: Writers recognize how punctuation marks help them organize words and communicate clearly. Punctuation can also convey emotion and tone of voice. It lets readers know how to read a sentence or paragraph.

Students will become more skilled at identifying punctuation marks and understanding that when they read and write, every punctuation mark counts.

Common Core State Standards: RI.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.2

Lesson 2: Interactive Read-Aloud

The Common Comma uses Barn Savers by Linda Oatman High.

Rationale: Writers use commas to separate information and indicate a slight pause to readers. In this lesson, students will explore the many ways a writer can use the common comma.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.2

Lesson 3: Interactive Read-Aloud

Hyphens and Dashes: Determining the Difference uses Up North at the Cabin by Marsha Wilson Chall.

Rationale: Although hyphens and dashes look similar, writers use them in very different ways. Students will learn the distinctions between hyphens and dashes and see how they can be used to make writing clearer and more informative.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.2, W.5.3

Lesson 4: Mini-Lesson

Punctuating Dialogue uses Twenty-Odd Ducks by Lynne Truss, Barn Savers by Linda Oatman High, and Up North at the Cabin by Marsha Wilson Chall.

Rationale: Writers use punctuation and dialogue tags to let readers know exactly who is saying what in a story. Students will review examples of dialogue from the mentor texts to notice and learn how writers punctuate dialogue.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, RI.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.2

Lesson 5: Interactive Read-Aloud

When Parentheses Are Perfect uses An Angel for Solomon Singer by Cynthia Rylant.

Rationale: Writers use parentheses to set off extra information in a sentence. Students will discover how parentheses can play a crucial role in the way a story unfolds.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.2

Lesson 6: Mini-Lesson

A Different Way to Add Information uses John Henry by Julius Lester.

Rationale: Writers use parentheses to add information that is important (but not essential) to a sentence. In this lesson, students will notice additional uses of parentheses that they can use to make their own writing more interesting and informative.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.2

Parts of Speech:

Lesson 1: Interactive Read-Aloud

Fantastic, Wow, and Unreal! uses Fantastic! Wow! and Unreal! by Ruth Heller.

Rationale: Writers use interjections to show excitement or emotion and use conjunctions to join sentences. In this interactive read-aloud, students will notice the functions of interjections and conjunctions in sentences and will learn how to use correlative conjunctions, such as “either/or” and “neither/nor.”

Common Core State Standards: RI.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, W.5.1

Lesson 2: Mini-Lesson

Interjections and Conjunctions uses Fantastic! Wow! and Unreal! by Ruth Heller and the shared text “Touchdown!”

Rationale: Writers know that interjections and conjunctions are important tools in their toolbox. Interjections help writers inject excitement or emotion into their texts. Interjections also help writers make their texts sound more like real people are talking. Writers use conjunctions to join a word, phrase, or sentence to another word, phrase, or sentence. Conjunctions help them vary sentence length, add information, and make sentences more interesting. In this lesson, students will use interjections and conjunctions to make a piece of their own writing more interesting and informative.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.1, W.5.1

Lesson 3: Interactive Read-Aloud

Present Tense Is Timely uses Fox by Margaret Wild.

Rationale: Writers use verb tenses to convey time in their stories. Students will learn how writers weave verbs in the past, present, and future tenses into their stories.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, W.5.3

Lesson 4: Mini-Lesson

The Perfect Tense uses Fox by Margaret Wild.

Rationale: Writers think about tense when they write their stories and share their messages. Students will learn how to form and use the perfect tense (I had walked. I have walked. I will have walked.).

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.1

Lesson 5: Mini-Lesson

Let's Learn More About Pronouns uses White Owl, Barn Owl by Nicola Davies.

Rationale: Writers know that pronouns are words that take the place of nouns. They also know that by using pronouns, they will use fewer words and avoid repetition. Students will continue to learn about parts of speech related to the different uses of pronouns.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.1

Sentence Structure:

Lesson 1: Interactive Read-Aloud

Simple, Compound, and Complex Sentences uses Dancing in the Wings by Debbie Allen.

Rationale: Writers can create rhythm with the words in a story by varying the kinds of sentences they use.

Writers

enrich their stories with variety by combining simple, compound, and complex sentences. Students will begin to notice the structures of sentences.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.3, W.5.3

Lesson 2: Interactive Read-Aloud

Transitions and Prepositional Phrases uses John Henry by Julius Lester.

Rationale: Writers can use transitions and prepositional phrases to provide clarity and emphasize the rhythm of their sentences. Students will learn how to identify and appreciate prepositions, as well as conjunctions and other transitions.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.3, W.5.3

Lesson 3: Mini-Lesson

Spice Up Sentences With Participial Phrases uses Dancing in the Wings by Debbie Allen, John Henry by Julius

Lester, and the shared text "The Meadow."

Rationale: Writers know that using participial phrases in a piece of writing can be a great way to vary the rhythm and flow of a sentence. Participles can also add spice to character descriptions. Students will begin to recognize participles and participial phrases and appreciate what they bring to a piece of writing.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.3

Lesson 4: Interactive Read-Aloud

Pausing for Paragraphs uses Down the Road by Alice Schertle.

Rationale: Writers know that paragraphs are the building blocks of a story—or just about any written composition.

One reason why writers use paragraphs is to separate the speakers of dialogue. Students will notice how writers begin a new paragraph each time the speaker changes.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.3, W.5.3

Lesson 5: Mini-Lesson

The Purpose of the Paragraph uses Down the Road by Alice Schertle.

Rationale: Writers know that the structure of paragraphs depends on the genre and the purpose for writing. Students will learn that some expository paragraphs use topic sentences and supporting details, and they will discover how writers of fiction sometimes use paragraphs to create rhythm and mood.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.3, W.5.3

Lesson 6: Mini-Lesson

Looking Ahead uses various selections from the mentor texts and the shared text “A Horse Named Cooper.”

Rationale: Writers celebrate all they have learned and continue to apply their skills. In this lesson, students will begin to celebrate their new knowledge and consider how to use it as they prepare to transition into the sixth grade.

Common Core State Standards: RL.5.1, SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.3, W.5.3

Culminating Mini-Lesson:

Culminating Mini-Lesson uses Dancing in the Wings by Debbie Allen, Twenty-Odd Ducks by Lynne Truss, and self-reflection sheets for students to complete.

Rationale: Writers use and apply rules for grammar and conventions in order to make their writing clear and appealing to their readers. Students in fifth grade have learned many new rules related to grammar and conventions, and they will use reflection tools to look back and recall everything they’ve learned.

Common Core State Standards: SL.5.1, L.5.1, L.5.2, L.5.3, W.5.3

	Shared features allow for common troubleshooting strategies that can be effective for many systems.
	Software and hardware work together as a system to accomplish tasks (e.g., sending, receiving, processing, and storing units of information).

Interdisciplinary Connections

Grammar conventions cross into all disciplines and are to be practiced and following in all writing.

Differentiation

- Understand that gifted students, just like all students, come to school to learn and be challenged.
- Pre-assess your students. Find out their areas of strength as well as those areas you may need to address before students move on.
- Consider grouping gifted students together for at least part of the school day.
- Plan for differentiation. Consider pre-assessments, extension activities, and compacting the curriculum.
- Use phrases like "You've shown you don't need more practice" or "You need more practice" instead of words like "qualify" or "eligible" when referring to extension work.
- Encourage high-ability students to take on challenges. Because they're often used to getting good grades, gifted students may be risk averse.

• Definitions of Differentiation Components:

- Content – the specific information that is to be taught in the lesson/unit/course of instruction.
- Process – how the student will acquire the content information.
- Product – how the student will demonstrate understanding of the content.
- Learning Environment – the environment where learning is taking place including physical location and/or student grouping

Benchmark Assessments

Benchmark Assessments are given periodically (e.g., at the end of every quarter or as frequently as once per month) throughout a school year to establish baseline achievement data and measure progress toward a standard or set of academic standards and goals.

Schoolwide Benchmark assessments:

Formative Assessments

Assessment allows both instructor and student to monitor progress towards achieving learning objectives, and can be approached in a variety of ways. Formative assessment refers to tools that identify misconceptions, struggles, and learning gaps along the way and assess how to close those gaps. It includes effective tools for helping to shape learning, and can even bolster students' abilities to take ownership of their learning when they understand that the goal is to improve learning, not apply final marks (Trumbull and Lash, 2013). It can include students assessing themselves, peers, or even the instructor, through writing, quizzes, conversation, and more. In short, formative assessment occurs throughout a class or course, and seeks to improve student achievement of learning objectives through approaches that can support specific student needs (Theal and Franklin, 2010, p. 151).

Formative Assessments used in this unit:

work sheets

rough drafts

discussions

Summative Assessments

Summative assessments evaluate student learning, knowledge, proficiency, or success at the conclusion of an instructional period, like a unit, course, or program. Summative assessments are almost always formally graded and often heavily weighted (though they do not need to be). Summative assessment can be used to great effect in conjunction and alignment with formative assessment, and instructors can consider a variety of ways to combine these approaches.
