Differentiation

- Understand that gifted students, just like all students, come to school to learn and be challenged.
- Pre-assess your students. Find out their areas of strength as well as those areas you may need to address before students move on.
- Consider grouping gifted students together for at least part of the school day.
- Plan for differentiation. Consider pre-assessments, extension activities, and compacting the curriculum.
- Use phrases like "You've shown you don't need more practice" or "You need more practice" instead of words like "qualify" or "eligible" when referring to extension work.
- Encourage high-ability students to take on challenges. Because they're often used to getting good grades, gifted students may be risk averse.
- Definitions of Differentiation Components:
 - Content – the specific information that is to be taught in the lesson/unit/course of instruction.
 - Process – how the student will acquire the content information.
 - Product – how the student will demonstrate understanding of the content.
 - Learning Environment – the environment where learning is taking place including physical location and/or student grouping

Provide Sample Cartoons For the Preview activity, prepare a sample cartoon strip to show as a model. Your example might be student work saved from the previous year. You might also show samples of comic strips from the newspaper to demonstrate the use of speech bubbles.

Complete the Reading Notes as a Class Rather than have pairs read and take notes on Sections 3.3 to 3.7 at one time, do the following for each section to guide the class to complete the Reading Notes:

- Ask, What is the title of this section? What do you see in the image? What do you think this section will talk about?
- Have students read the first paragraph in the section and fill in the first Reading Notes question about the Paleolithic Age. Review the answer as a class.
- Then ask, How do you think daily life will change in the Neolithic Age? Tell students to read the rest of that section to see if their guesses are correct. Then have students complete their Reading Notes.
- Have volunteers read their speech bubbles about Neolithic changes.

Support the Reading Notes Provide a Word Bank for each section of notes. Tell students that they should include the following terms or phrases in their answers:

Section 2: hunter-gatherer, food, shelter, fertile

Section 3: dangerous, food supply, milk, meat, crops

Section 4: tents, wild animals, mud, cooking pit, protection

Section 5: settle, communities, defend

Section 6: food, specialized skills, beautiful, variety

Section 7: nearby, trade, travel, resources, spread ideas

Advanced Learners

Writing Assignment

Add the following item to the directions on Student Handout 3A:

Include one additional story page on which you explain how one of the key changes from Paleolithic to Neolithic life paved the way for modern society. For example, Modern Maria might explain that because Neolithic Nel and Nick began to specialize in one job, people in our modern society attend college or technical schools to learn specific skills.

Formative Assessments

Assessment allows both instructor and student to monitor progress towards achieving learning objectives, and can be approached in a variety of ways. Formative assessment refers to tools that identify misconceptions, struggles, and learning gaps along the way and assess how to close those gaps. It includes effective tools for helping to shape learning, and can even bolster students' abilities to take ownership of their learning when they understand that the goal is to improve learning, not apply final marks (Trumbull and Lash, 2013). It can include students assessing themselves, peers, or even the instructor, through writing, quizzes, conversation, and more. In short, formative assessment occurs throughout a class or course, and seeks to improve student achievement of learning objectives through approaches that can support specific student needs (Theal and Franklin, 2010, p. 151).

Formative Assessments used in this unit:

See assessment imbedded in daily lesson plans above.

Summative Assessments

Summative assessments evaluate student learning, knowledge, proficiency, or success at the conclusion of an instructional period, like a unit, course, or program. Summative assessments are almost always formally graded and often heavily weighted (though they do not need to be). Summative assessment can be used to great effect in conjunction and alignment with formative assessment, and instructors can consider a variety of ways to combine these approaches.
