Differentiation

- Understand that gifted students, just like all students, come to school to learn and be challenged.
- Pre-assess your students. Find out their areas of strength as well as those areas you may need to address before students move on.
- Consider grouping gifted students together for at least part of the school day.
- Plan for differentiation. Consider pre-assessments, extension activities, and compacting the curriculum.
- Use phrases like "You've shown you don't need more practice" or "You need more practice" instead of words like "qualify" or "eligible" when referring to extension work.
- Encourage high-ability students to take on challenges. Because they're often used to getting good grades, gifted students may be risk averse.
- Definitions of Differentiation Components:
 - Content – the specific information that is to be taught in the lesson/unit/course of instruction.
 - Process – how the student will acquire the content information.
 - Product – how the student will demonstrate understanding of the content.
 - Learning Environment – the environment where learning is taking place including physical location and/or student grouping

Differentiation occurring in this unit:

Learners with Special Needs

- Share Information Verbally For Sections 3–7, have students identify and share with a partner at least three important details about the daily lives of the social class in each section.
- Color-code the Reading Notes Have students select one color for each of the social classes. Beginning with the Reading Notes for Section 2, students should write their notes in the selected color for each social class.

Provide Copies of the Reading As students complete their Reading Notes, consider providing a copy of the reading for Sections 3–7. Students can complete the second task for each of these sections by highlighting the appropriate facts for that social class. Students can complete the third task for each of these sections by underlining statements that answer the question.

Cut Apart Student Handouts Rather than give groups a copy of both pages of the Student Handout 9 for their assigned social class, cut apart the handout by step. Give each group member the corresponding step for his or her assigned role in a dramatization. With less to read, students can be more focused on the task at hand.

- Have Students Share a Role Create groups of five students to allow two of the group members to share a role during the activity. Alternatively, review the responsibilities of the roles with students ahead of time and have them select a role in which they feel most comfortable.
- Offer Sentence Starters For the Processing activity, give students these sentence starters to compare each level on the social pyramids.

Advanced Learners

- Have Students Write a Dialogue In place of the Processing activity, have students create at least two characters from two different social levels and write a one-page dialogue between the characters that highlights the similarities and differences in their lives. The dialogues should include the following:
 - a description of the main role of each character in Egyptian society
 - two differences that set the social classes apart from each other
 - one thing that each character would have in common with the other

Formative Assessments

Assessment allows both instructor and student to monitor progress towards achieving learning objectives, and can be approached in a variety of ways. Formative assessment refers to tools that identify misconceptions, struggles, and learning gaps along the way and assess how to close those gaps. It includes effective tools for helping to shape learning, and can even bolster students' abilities to take ownership of their learning when they understand that the goal is to improve learning, not apply final marks (Trumbull and Lash, 2013). It can include students assessing themselves, peers, or even the instructor, through writing, quizzes, conversation, and more. In short, formative assessment occurs throughout a class or course, and seeks to improve student achievement of learning objectives through approaches that can support specific student needs (Theal and Franklin, 2010, p. 151).

Formative Assessments used in this unit:

See assessment in lesson plans above.

Summative Assessments

Summative assessments evaluate student learning, knowledge, proficiency, or success at the conclusion of an instructional period, like a unit, course, or program. Summative assessments are almost always formally graded and often heavily weighted (though they do not need to be). Summative assessment can be used to great effect in conjunction and alignment with formative assessment, and instructors can consider a variety of ways to combine these approaches.
