General Overview, Course Description or Course Philosophy

This course is designed to empower students by providing learning experiences that encourage and foster conscious and healthy decision making, involving relationships, sexuality, family planning, and more. This course includes discussions of abstinence and helps to develop attitudes, values and skills that are essential in making responsible decisions regarding sexuality throughout their life. This course also features aspects of simulated parenting responsibilities throughout the marking period long baby project.

OBJECTIVES, ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS, ENDURING UNDERSTANDINGS

Marriage, Divorce, Parenting, Teen Pregnancy, Costs Associated - 10-12 Classes.

In this unit students will build off of the family dynamics and relationships units. Students will engage in opportunities to review the responsibilities of marriage, the effects of divorce and the planning for a family with a focus on child development into adulthood and various parenting issues. The purpose is to explore personal values and attitudes towards parenthood. Students will learn about challenges teenage parents face and the qualities and resources needed for parenthood up to age 5 of a child. Students will examine the costs of caring for the child, and evaluate their personal readiness for parenthood. Students participate in discussions of decision making and analyzing options associated with teen pregnancy. Students will assess the costs of independent living as well as a cost analysis relating to child care and a child's needs.
