General Overview, Course Description or Course Philosophy

Spanish 3H

The study of another language and culture enables individuals, whether functioning as citizens or workers, to communicate face-to-face and by virtual means in appropriate ways with people from diverse cultures. An education in world languages fosters a population that: communicates in more than one language with the levels of language proficiency that are required to function in a variety of occupations and careers in the contemporary workplace, exhibits attitudes, values, and skills that indicate a positive disposition and understanding of cultural differences and that enhance cross-cultural communication and values language learning as a global literacy as well as for its long-term worth in fostering personal, work-related, and/or financial success in our increasingly interconnected world.

This course provides students with the fundamental background to speak, to read, to write, and to understand the target language. A great deal of stress is placed on the development of audio-lingual skills including correct pronunciation, intonation, and accentuation. There will be a continued emphasis on the development of listening, speaking, reading and writing skills using the communicative approach. Additional material for development of reading skills is provided for each student. The units on the culture and civilization of the target culture are expanded.

There will be a continued emphasis on the three modes of communication: interpretive, interpersonal, and presentational. Different opportunities will be provided to develop the listening, speaking, reading and writing skills using the communicative approach. Cultural aspects of the target language/culture will be expanded as well. Students are introduced to songs, movies and short literature selections throughout the year. The use of authentic materials will be provided to each student.

OBJECTIVES, ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS, ENDURING UNDERSTANDINGS

Students will understand:

- there are similarities and differences in the production of food in Latin American and

North America.

- the correct use of grammar and vocabulary is important to facilitate communication.
- geography influences the type of food grown, exported and consumed in Latin America and North America.
- a country's perspective will influence the type of food products and practices.
- the use of the imperative grammatical form depends on the register of the dialogue.

Essential Questions:

- How does food production differ in Latin America vs. North America?
- How does geography influence the type of food consumption and exportation in Latin America?
- How does the rhythm of life affect the types of food consumed in North America?
- How does the register (the person being spoken to or about) impact the type of imperative command you use?
- Does register play a role in how imperative commands are used in North America?
- What is the importance of traditional meals?

Enduring Understandings:

- Cultural perspectives (respect for elders and unknown individuals) plays a big role in almost all aspects of grammar, but definitely in the type of imperative commands used.
- Imperative formal commands are given to an adult or a group of people.
- Food consumption and exportation are greatly influenced by geography (rural areas eat fresh food from their farms / sea food is popular in areas close to the sea-Spain)
- Countries and cities with a faster lifestyle are more likely to eat processed food.
- World hunger is a global issue.

Diversity and Inclusion

- Awareness of diversity & inclusion issues as relating to immigration, history, visual and performing arts, literature, climate, subject area content, population where appropriate in the content area.
- Awareness of political, economic, and social contributions, inclusive of all people, where appropriate to the content area.
