Big Idea

Chapter 5 - The Road to Revolution (1745 - 1776)

Conflict between the 13 colonies and Great Britain began after Britain defeated France and its Indian allies in the French and Indian War. Burdened with war debt, the British Parliament tried raising revenue by passing a number of acts imposing taxes on the 13 colonies. Angered by taxes, the colonists protested. Peaceful protest turned violent and the British government reacted by passing harsh laws and levying more taxes. Tensions increased until the colonists and the British engaged in battle at Lexington and Concord in 1775. These battles marked the start of the American Revolution.

Chapter 6 - The American Revolution (1776 - 1783)

The Declaration of Independence, which was approved by Congress on July 4, 1776, listed the reasons the colonies wanted their freedom and independence. The document charged that King George had violated the colonists' natural rights. The Revolutionary War became a war fought to protect and expand the ideas of rights and self-government that were taken from the John Locke and the ideas of Enlightenment. The American War for Independence was the first time in the history of the world that a colony had successfully rebelled against its ruling country.

Chapter 7 - Creating the Constitution (1776 - 1790)

Weaknesses in the Articles of Confederation convinced leading Americans that the country needed a strong central government. After months of intense debate, delegates to the Constitutional Convention agreed on a new plan of government. The states approved the Constitution, but many of the states insisted that it also include a Bill of Rights.
