Big Idea

Chapter 17: The West Transformed (1860-1896)

Chapter 18: Industry, Urban Growth, Child Labor (1865-1915)

Chapter 19: Political Reform & the Progressive Era (1870-1920)

Native American wars, Dawes Act, Reservation System, Gilded Age Politics, the Robber Barons (methods, accomplishments, and philosophies), the rise of labor unions (leaders, methods, successes, and failures), the Pendleton Act, the GAR, William Jennings Bryan, Populist Party, the Grange, gold standard vs. silver standard. Local and state progressive reforms (types of municipal governments, mayors, state governors and representatives), national progressivism plans and programs (Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson), The Square Deal, New Freedom, muckrakers, women's issues, consumer protection, political corruption, environmental protection, business and labor issues.

Theme: Struggle for equality, Native American relations, role of government in economic growth and regulation, and the impact of industrialization socially, economically, and politically.

This American history unit provides a means for students to analyze whether the issue of child labor has significantly changed over time and why child labor has remained a permanent fixture in both developed and developing countries. Students enter into the controversial debate of whether or not child labor is an economic necessity by evaluating competing source documents, investigating international perspectives, and contacting international students as well as experts in the field. The unit culminates with students producing short You Tube videos; then submitting requests to link their videos to youth-oriented advocacy Websites, with the goal of raising awareness and encouraging advocacy among their peers.

Child Labor Unit:

The issue of child labor is very complicated because it stems from a number of larger problems, including poverty, lack of education, and abuse of human rights. Developing historical awareness, an understanding of why this issue persists in today's world, and a means by which young people can effectively advocate for change are essential components of global awareness and civic literacy in the 21st century. By analyzing historical trends and comparing multiple perspectives, each student can gain insight into this relevant world issue, form an opinion on the topic, and enter into the debate by taking a stand and attempting to affect change.

Enduring Understanding

Beliefs influence actions

Conflict leads to changes, both positive and negative

Different factors in America led to its expansion, such as a growth in immigration, desire to move, rumors and opportunities

The belief in Manifest Destiny supported people's choices of the Native American problem in the west

Children in the labor force have historically been, and still are, exploited through lower wages and unsatisfactory working conditions

The view of child labor as an acceptable means to escape poverty depends on one's perspective

Students can be effective advocates for change, even when issues are extremely complex and global in nature

Essential Questions

Can the "white man's conquest" of Native Americans be justified? Have Native Americans been treated fairly by the United States government?

There was a second wave of American expansionism, a "new" Manifest Destiny, after the frontier was "closed" according to Frederick Jackson Turner. To what extent did this justify or support Turner's "frontier thesis?"

Of the many reform movements occurring during the Progressive Era, which reform movement had the most positive, lasting impact on society to this day? What evidence exists in today's society to support your opinion?

How did the Progressive Era change life for Americans?

To what extent can the government regulate human behavior?

Does racial equality depend upon government action?

Should African Americans have more strongly resisted the government's decision to abandon the drive for equality? (Booker T. Washington's "accommodation" vs. W.E.B. Dubois' "agitation" approaches)

Can reform movements improve American society and politics? (Progressivism)

Does government have a responsibility to help the needy?

Has child labor significantly changed over time?

Is child labor an economic necessity?

How can you make your voice heard and initiate others to act?

Interdisciplinary Connections

- Academic and Technical Rigor Projects are designed to address key learning standards identified by the school or district.
- Authenticity Projects use a real world context (e.g., community and workplace problems) and address issues that matter to the students.
- Applied Learning Projects engage students in solving problems calling for competencies expected in high-performance work organizations (e.g.,teamwork, problem-solving, communication, etc.).
- Active Exploration Projects extend beyond the classroom by connecting to internships, fieldbased investigations, and community explorations.
- Adult Connections Projects connect students with adult mentors and coaches from the wider community.
- Assessment Practices Projects involve students in regular, performance-based exhibitions and assessments of their work; evaluation criteria reflect personal, school, and real-world standards of performance.
